Cannabis Intervention Session

Gunja is a problem for some people in the community. A Cannabis Intervention Session can help you think about how gunja is affecting you, your spirit, your health, family and community.

At your Cannabis Intervention Session you can yarn with a health worker about gunja, other drugs and things that are happening in your life.

In many locations you can see a male or a female health worker, or you can see an Aboriginal health worker. Talk to the Cannabis Intervention Session Booking Service staff for assistance when you book your CIS.

You can go by yourself to your Cannabis Intervention Session, or you can take family. It's up to you. If you want to yarn more you can go back.

When we look after ourselves we are looking after family, community and culture.

Going to a Cannabis Intervention Session can help you to make choices about your gunja use.

Take your CIR and photo ID with you to the health agency.

Make sure you don't use grog or any drugs before you go.

Even if you live a long way from services you can still complete a Cannabis Intervention Session. The Cannabis Intervention Session Booking Service can help. Just call 1800 722 362.
